"Good Clothes for Men Who Know"

Sermon Yesterday

There was a very large attendance at the First Lutheran church Sunday morning witnessing the confirmation of eleven young people. The beautiful decorations of the church and the excellent music made the service solemn and impressive. The pastor spoke to the catechumen on the text, "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life," and said in part:

These are the words of Christ, spoken of old to the church at Smyrna. But as never before he speaks these same words to you at this occasion. From the unseen throne of his power he speaks to you and to all who hear his voice, "Be thou faithful unto death." And the reward shall be, "A crown of life." This voice of the Eternal has never been silent and shall not cease as long as there is a man to heed it. Men have scorned this voice, they have ignored it, but in spite of scorn and indifference it has been sounding more and more powerful and distinct. Its echoes and re-echoes have crossed land and seas, valleys and mountains, habitations and desert wilds. It has never sounded so distinct and personal to you, my young friends, as it does today at your confirmation and first communion. "Be thou faithful." It is the substance of the vow your God and your church require of you today. The full and final reward shall not be given you here in the church militant, but in the church triumphant, when you have finished the good fight, when you have been faithful unto death.

Now you ask me in what you are required to be faithful. Be faithful in all things. Be faithful in performing the duties of your various callings in life. You have duties toward your fellow men. Special duties toward your people. Remember, that the fourth commandment promises a reward already in this life for honoring father and mother. Their old age is coming on. Their hair is turning gray. The lines in their foreheads are deepening, perhaps in laboring and worrying for you. Young people spare your parents the heart-breaking experience of feeling themselves neglected in old age by their own children. You will place a costly wreath of flowers on your father's and your mother's coffins on the graves of friend that go before you. But do not wait until then to show them your respect and love. Place a flower of kindness in their hands while they live and their dying blessings will rest sweetly on your heads.

You must also be faithful to your church, for your church is God's representative in this world. Be faithful to her confessions, and faithful in keeping the vows you make today. The church has many difficulties to contend with. One of the greatest is to keep the young people in the church. Our church rejoices over her faithful band of young people, and has a new cause to rejoice today that this loyal band is increasing. But as I look upon your earnest faces today I wonder will any of you prove faithless? Will any one of you go from your first communion today and never kneel at the altar again? I tell you my young friends that one of the saddest experiences in your pastor's life is to see the young people leave their church and break their confirmation vow. There is no blessing in being faithless, but it will leave a stain on the character and on the soul. There is no reward of glory to the faithless, but to the faithful there is a crown of life in store.

I admonish you therefore before God and before this congregation. "Be thou faithful unto death," faithful in your station and calling, faithful to your church and you will then be faithful unto your God. And you shall receive the reward at the hands of the prince of life.

"Then keep my heart forever, O my Savior."

And let me never, Lord from thee depart. In joy, in pain, in sorrow, now and ever. Thine only givest solace to my heart.

For when, O Lord, I am with thee, All other comforts well may flee; With Thee I am ever blessed."

An Animal Story For Little Folks

NOT SO BADLY MADE AFTER ALL

One day the giraffe and the elephant met on a plain by the side of the river Nile.

"I agree with you," said the giraffe hotly. "We were made to be perfect sights. Why, in the name of goodness, were we not made better looking? I can't for the life of me see. Look at my 'rubber' neck. It's so long and ugly that I feel uneasy whenever I go out in society. Why, I can't find a place in all Egypt where I can get a collar to fit me, and even if I could I could not get money enough together to pay for having it washed."

"True, true," said the elephant sadly. "And just look what a sight I am. It's bad enough to be covered with a hide

"I GUESS WE WERE NOT MADE SO BADLY," like leather, all wrinkled and ugly, without having to have a tail put on my front end as well as my rear."

"I don't see," cried the elephant, switching his proboscis angrily, "why they ever made us such frights."

But just then it was dinner time, and both were hungry.

Mr. Giraffe reached gracefully up with his long neck and took a mouthful of sweet palm fards.

"Couldn't have done that without your neck," said Mr. Elephant.

Then he reached down and got a good wisp of rich grass and put it into his mouth.

Another interesting fact those at the Jamestown celebration will have an opportunity to observe will be that while every other officer goes down the gang-plank facing down, the major of marines always backs down with elaborate care, as if he were leaving the presence of his sovereign. Those who are puzzled by this fact will find sufficient explanation when they look down at his feet where long spurs project, making descent if not distinctly hazardous, at least exceedingly uncomfortable. The major of marines is the only officer in the British navy, or probably any other navy, who has the honor of wearing spurs.

DECK AND DOCK NEWS.

The fine four-masted schooner A. F. Coates, with her big load of lumber from the Clatsop mills, left down and out yesterday forenoon on the hawsers of the bar tug Walhalla. Captain Thornton Morrison and his bride were on deck as she pulled out, and may not have known that there were two long and handsome streamers of white silk floating in the breeze from her stern, evidently put there over night by some of the many friends they have made here during their stay, as wedding favors. At any rate they leave this port with the abundant good will of many friends who wish them a long and pleasant cruise over the sea of life.

The steamer Cascades left down and out for San Francisco yesterday morning.

The fine oil-tanker Asuncion arrived in yesterday morning from the California coast, and proceeded directly to Portland.

The steamer Hassalo put in a few hours yesterday on a run to the north shore, where she picked up 1000 cases of salmon which she will take on to Portland this morning.
